

RetireLaw Client Questionnaire

This questionnaire provides RetireLaw solicitors with the essential information needed to understand both your personal and asset circumstances so we can provide you with strategic and tailored estate planning advice following your free initial consultation.

All information we receive from you is kept strictly confidential.

Please complete as much or as little of the questionnaire as you feel comfortable with before your initial consultation with RetireLaw.

At the end of that consultation, your RetireLaw solicitor will provide you with (1) advice about how best to ensure your wishes are recorded and protected via our modern estate planning Wills and other documents, and (2) a lump sum fee quote for you to consider.

If you wish to proceed, based on the recommendations and fee quote provided, a second appointment will be made for you so that your tailored modern estate planning Will(s) and associated documents can be fully explained, validly signed and witnessed.

If you are yet to make an appointment for your initial consultation, please speak to your professional adviser or contact RetireLaw solicitors Terry Purcell or Dawn Wong on (02) 8908 9700.

To learn more about modern estate planning in the comfort of your home or office, please watch our online presentation called 'The Convenient Truth'. To view go to www.retirelaw.com.au or Google 'The Convenient Truth About Wills'.

You have absolutely nothing to lose and everything to protect.

YOUR CURRENT WILL MAY NOT OPERATE OVER:

A simple Will only operates to distribute assets which you personally own, i.e. your estate. It would normally not operate over:

- Jointly held assets. On the death of one co-owner, a jointly held asset goes directly to the survivor, bypassing the Will completely. To ensure additional asset protection for a home which is now jointly held, we recommend that the title be changed to tenants in common - see note below.
- Superannuation death benefits. The trustee of your superannuation fund may have the final decision as to who gets your superannuation. You may influence the result by completing a 'death benefit nomination'.
- Assets held in a trust. The terms of the relevant Trust Deed covers what happens to the control of the Trust and the assets held by the Trust on your death.
- The proceeds of any life insurance policies, unless you have nominated your estate as your beneficiary.
- The shares you hold in a private company may be incapable of transfer without the consent of other shareholders.

Unlike a simple Will, a RetireLaw Estate Planning Will gives your executors the authority to take into account or, in some instances, deal with such assets as listed above alongside your personally owned assets when implementing the wishes expressed in your Will.

This is particularly significant when the estate is to be divided equally between all of your children on the death of the surviving spouse. Your executors can make sure each child takes an absolutely equal share in your estate through adjustment provisions dealing with potential inequalities arising from superannuation payments or loans to some and not others.

RetireLaw's Estate Planning Wills give your executors the authority to ensure that your beneficiaries receive their inheritances in the most cost and tax effective way via beneficiary controlled testamentary trusts (see explanation p9).

RetireLaw's Wills are flexible enough to meet your needs over an extended period of time, although significant changes in your personal circumstances or changes in the law that are likely to affect estate administration would warrant a review of your Estate Planning documents by RetireLaw.

Note regarding severing the joint tenancy of your home

The most common way of a couple owning their home is as joint tenants which means that on the death of the first co-owner, the survivor becomes the sole owner. This gives rise to the risk of losing some, or the whole home, if the survivor, or their estate, is sued by a future domestic partner or a creditor. The recommended alternative is to change the title to tenants in common in equal shares, a tax free low cost procedure, which means on the death of a spouse, the survivor has an option whereby they can continue to live in the deceased partner's share of the home via a right of occupation which protects at least that part of the home from such third party claims.

YOUR EXECUTOR

Executors are legally responsible for carrying out your wishes when you die. A beneficiary can be executor, provided they are over the qualifying age. You can have more than one but it is not a good idea to have too many. Appointees should be people you trust and who are, preferably, familiar with your affairs.

The recommended approach is to appoint your spouse first and then children over qualifying age as substitute executors. It is important to nominate a second choice for executor in case your first choice dies before you or cannot act because of incapacity. Appointing an independent executor or trustee company is unnecessary in most cases. If you are in any doubt about your choice of executor then this is a matter which must be discussed with the RetireLaw solicitor at your initial meeting.

GUARDIANS OF CHILDREN UNDER 18

If you have young children when making your Will, you should nominate one or more persons to be their guardian/s in the event that both you and your spouse/partner die before those children reach 18. The appointment of a guardian under your Will would be subject to Court approval and there is always the possibility that a Court may exercise its over-riding discretion to appoint or remove a guardian other than your nominated guardian.

Your children may wish to reside with someone other than your nominated guardian. In these circumstances the Court as always would take your children's best interests into account in deciding the issue. It is the guardian's responsibility to make the important "life decisions" on behalf of the child. The guardian must ensure that the child is adequately housed, clothed and educated. The guardianship of minor children is a responsible task.

You should think carefully about the appointment of a guardian and attempt to appoint one or more persons who:

- are prepared to take on the responsibility;
- are of a similar age to you; and
- hold similar social religious and cultural views to you.

or the survivor of them to act as guardian(s) of our children while they are under 18.

QUALIFYING AGE

We normally recommend a qualifying age of twenty-five (25), which means that any beneficiary must attain this age before taking personal control of their inheritance. We would not recommend lowering that age, but it is your right to do so, while the age can also be increased. However, anything higher than 30 would, in our experience, impose unreasonable obligations on your executors. It is not practical to nominate children under the qualifying age as executors or Powers of Attorney.

If a different qualifying age is required, please indicate here:years.

If you are concerned about a beneficiary's capacity to manage an inheritance, then you may need additional provisions in your Will to deal with this issue. We suggest you discuss this matter with the RetireLaw solicitor at your initial meeting.

YOUR ESTATE

In the first instance, your Estate Planning Will provides for your entire estate to be left to your spouse/partner via a beneficiary controlled testamentary trust (BCTT – see box below).

On the death of the surviving spouse/partner, your Will distributes your share of the estate to your surviving children via BCTTs, with each child being the trustee of their own individual trust after attaining the qualifying age.

If one of your children dies before you leaving children, ie. your grandchildren, his/her share of your estate is distributed equally between his/her children. If a deceased child has no children, their share of your estate is divided equally between your surviving children.

In circumstances where all the members of your family die before you, our Wills allow you to nominate “reserve beneficiaries” who share your estate. This provision allows you to specify those you might wish to benefit from your estate, such as your parents and/or siblings and your spouse/partner’s parents and/or siblings. Alternatively, you are free to nominate specific members of your wider families, friends or charities.

Failure to nominate reserve beneficiaries means that you risk your estate being distributed among remoter relatives as per the rules of intestacy, as specified in Succession Act 2006 and applying since 2010 who you may not like to see inherit from you.

PLEASE NOTE: Your estate may be subject to considerable expense and delay in distribution if you exclude from your Will anyone who could expect to receive an inheritance from your estate, ie. family members or other people who have or had a relationship with or who were dependent on you.

What is a Beneficiary Controlled Testamentary Trust?

A simple Will distributes your estate to your beneficiaries in their own names, that is, their inheritance becomes part of their personal assets, and thus makes the inheritance vulnerable to being split by the Family Court if a beneficiary’s relationship subsequently breaks down, or lost completely to creditors if a beneficiary is declared bankrupt for any reason.

Your Estate Planning Will gives each of your beneficiaries the option to hold their inheritance in their own beneficiary controlled testamentary trust (BCTT), protecting the inheritance in the event of relationship breakdown or bankruptcy, and offering income sharing opportunities which can have significant long term tax advantages for beneficiaries and their families.

The terms of the BCTTs established under your Will define:

- the class of beneficiaries (including a power to permanently or temporarily exclude a beneficiary, eg. to ensure means tested pension eligibility or eligibility for the small business active asset concessions in Division 152 of the Capital Gains Tax provisions);
- distributions of net income, capital and other benefits to beneficiaries – income tax concessions apply to beneficiaries under 18 years;
- the power to appoint the trustee and sharing of control if two or more beneficiaries take control of the trust after the primary beneficiary dies;
- the crisis protective trust provisions – where the executor assumes control in the event of the primary beneficiary become bankrupt or otherwise under a legal disability; and
- the eventual winding-up of the trust.

YOUR ENDURING POWER OF ATTORNEY

Appointing someone as an Enduring Power of Attorney is a precautionary matter so that your business and financial affairs can be conducted by someone sensitive to your needs if you become incapacitated and are unable to attend to your own affairs. Usually people appoint their spouse, then one or more of their children jointly and severally as back-up attorneys. It is a good idea to appoint second choice attorneys in case your first choice dies or becomes incapacitated, although care should be taken not to allow one child unrestricted powers. You should only appoint someone you trust. Please note that children under 18yrs cannot be appointed.

An Enduring Power of Attorney specifically provides that it will continue to be effective even if you lose legal capacity after you have signed it. It will be tailored to enable your attorney to manage your superannuation in the event that you are not able to do so. People appointed as your attorney must sign acceptance of appointment before it comes into effect. In recent years legislation has significantly increased the security for the principal, that is, the person granting the Power of Attorney, by requiring an appointee to a list of obligations when accepting appointment as an attorney, breach of which will lead to both civil and/or criminal penalties. A Power of Attorney can be revoked at any time and its authority ceases immediately on your death.

A Power of Attorney cannot be used for health or lifestyle decisions – see next page. If you are in any doubt about your choice of attorney, then this is a matter which must be discussed with the RetireLaw solicitor at your initial meeting.

YOUR APPOINTMENT OF ENDURING GUARDIAN

Your Enduring Guardian is the person you nominate to make lifestyle and medical decisions for you if you become incapable of making those decisions for yourself. You should only appoint someone you trust and who is sensitive to your wishes. An “Enduring Power of Guardianship” only comes into effect upon your loss of capacity and will continue to be effective during the period of your incapacity.

Appointing a guardian is done as a precautionary matter so that if you are unable to make decisions about where you live and what medical treatment you will receive. Your guardian will make these decisions on your behalf. Most people appoint their spouse as first choice, then all or some of their children jointly and severally as back-up guardians. It is important to appoint second choice guardians in case your first choice dies or becomes incapacitated. Please note that children under 18 cannot be appointed. People appointed as your guardian must sign acceptance of appointment before it comes into effect. An Appointment of Enduring Guardianship can be revoked at any time and ceases to be valid on your death. Your guardian has no power to deal with your assets. If you are in any doubt about your choice of attorney, then this is a matter which must be discussed with the RetireLaw solicitor at your initial meeting.
